DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

The Boston Herald reviews the story of the conductor between Gen. Butler and "Squire" Cox. The former, after being subjected, for some time to the latter's witty sallies, and denying what he had said, and exclaimed:

"Squire, you don't bother me!" Mr. Cox sat down on him. The "Squire" was not bothered. —Continued Commercial Gazette.

The above reminds us of what one of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's biographers says of the person who reported Sheridan's speeches and spoiled them in reporting them—that he showed a great faculty for reducing diamonds to charcoal. The Butler-Cox story is truly spoiled in the above telling. Gen. Butler had charge of a bill, and in the time allocated to him for closing the debate he was answering seriatim the members who had opposed him. He treated them all with respect until he came to Mr. Cox, whom he answered last. "And now," said he, "as to the gentleman from New York who sits on my right, my answer shall be very brief, and very simple. It is whistled by the bootblacks on the street; it is sung by the chambermaids in the hotels; it is in everybody's mouth: 'Squire, fly; don't bother me!' Butler suited the action to the word by drawing his right hand rapidly across his ears as if aimed at an intruding fly, and took his seat and the tremendous laughter of the House. It is not true, as the Commer- cial Gazette states, that Mr. Cox sat quietly down. He jumped on a chair and, gesticulating like a man doing duty in the army signal corps, shouted something about "spoons" at Butler, but what he said was lost in the tumult provoked by Butler's wit, and his angry manner intensified the laughter against him. A short time afterwards Cox got partially even with Butler. He (Cox) had the floor and was alluding to a remark made in debate by a Massachusetts member.

Butler jumped up and asked Cox if he

said Cox; "I said the honorable gentleman from Massachusetts," putting great emphasis on the adjective.
